YOUTH, LEARNING, FREEDOM.

The Russian students are fermenting with rebellious feelings. The flower of a pation is to be found in its universities and colleges. No higher source of systematized education is provided than that which such institutions provide. It is at these time-honored springs of learning that a country's pride imbibes the mental papulum which will be assimilated into the character and principles of the future citizens.

The university students of Russia would be an anomaly beyond explanation were they to pass through this period of cap and gown in which fiery, eager youth thirsts to adjust the world. There are thousands in Russia who regard the Czar as the "Little Father" and love and emerate him. But there are also thousands in that vast Empire who feel that ALEXANDER is a tyrant and that their subjection is utter slavery.

Naturally His Imperial autocracy scorns revolt, criticism or investigation The activity of student brains is a dangerous thing, and may prove the nurse of Nihillets or liberators. Thus measures of coercion have been applied, but with meagre success. ALEXANDER the Czar is sensitive to the mutterings of the whirlwind. No wonder.

Socialists in every country whose government is monarchical may be thought open to "foreign influence," since the spirit that actuates them is certainly not cognate to any principles based on the one-man rule. The Problem of "What Shall We Do With Our Girls?"

the Real Question. ing to Do with the Amenities or Conventionalities of Seciety.

Competitors for THE EVENING WORLD'S What-shall-we-do-with - our - Girls prize are not on the right track. They are considering the moral, ethical and social side of the problem, whereas an industrial solution is the one wanted.

The question at issue is, What shall we do with our girls commercially, financially, industrially?

It is a labor problem and has nothing to do with the amenities or convention alities of society. The theory of pretty manners, piety, gentleness, neatness filial love and sisterly devotion are all beautiful enough, but not pertinent to the subject. It is not a question of saving nice things, wearing dainty morning aresses, keeping the baby quiet, helping mother, warming father's slippers and rubbing brother's feathers the right way, but of income and expenses, profit and loss, wages, occupation, capacity, appli-cation, skill and technical knowledge. In a word, it is business. By way of hypothesis, Maria Jane Barrel is nineteen years of age and a graduate o School 2, 602. The family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Barrel, brother George Bismarck Barrel, the aforesaid Miss Barrel and five or six little kegs. The home is comfortable, cosy, sweet. The hearthstone is always warm and bright, there are preserves and pickles in the pantry, good clothes in the wardrobes, a tight little money-bag in some safety vault, and everything is lovely in the home nest. Brother George, who is nearing his majority, has a position in a commercial house and a salery of $1,200, which, with the $2,000 earmings of Mr. Barrel, sr., helps to make the home the heaven it is. Miss Barrel is bright, quick, independent and restless. She wants to do something. She is too good to be turned into a kitchen dradge. It is a sacrilege to pollute her pretty white hands with stovetory. The same thing has been done quantity of tramp element can be had for a daily dime to carry up coal, carry down ashes, beat carpets, scrub out corners and clean windows. A big, strapping grenadier of a girl, with Polish roses in her cheeks and iron-like muscles in her arms, may be hired in Castle Garden for a dozen dollars a month, who can do more housework in a day than Mrs. and Miss Barrel can do in a week.

Now comes the question, What shall we do with the girl?

Let her stay at home and sew? But she doesn't know how. She can darn stockings, sew on buttons, apply patches neatly, keep her own wardrobe ton embroidery, but she can't fit a basque, make a cloak or trim a hat, and her mother is powerless to teach her. Still she is restless and getting more so all the time; she is discontented and unhappy. She wants to kick away the ball, preak the chair, shake off the shackle, run out and do something. She wants freedom. She can't sing, dance or act but wants an engagement—not to star or oven play leading lady. A juvenile part of two lines will delight her, or she could be joyful, contented, satisfied with chorus

ATHLETES IN REPOSE.

E. J. Giannini has distinguished himself in nearly every branch of athletics. He strokes the New York Athletic Club crew when he has nothing else to do. He ts also a coming shot-pu In fact he always does credit to the M H. H. Janoway, the ethereal football player of Princeton College, weight only 2000 pounds when in training. He is going to slam the 10-pound hammer around and toes the weights in the Intercollegiate games this Spring. A. S. Vosburgh is something of an athlete him A. 0, Yossungs is sometime of an athlets num-self as well as a manager of athletic events. He managed the Columbia College football tunin has Fall, and now he is going to manage to capture some running events for the bire and white this Spring. He is tall and strongly built.

Frank Seating will do the spider act this year for the Metropolitana, as he has determined to compete in the single-shell events. He is a clever fellow with the scalls and has distinguished himself and his Club in times past.

"IF I COULD ONLY EAT." Dyspopula, Distress, Indigestion, Senso of Fulness and Swelling after meals, Faintness, Wind in Stomach, Loss of Appe-Finishess, Wied in Stomach, Loss of Appetite, Dizzliess, Liver Diseans and Commination generally arise from weakness or demand of the nerves of the digestive organs, and are very prevalent, especially during the Spring months. The very best known researd for these uncomfortable and distreasing conditions in Dr. Garcene's Nervura, the great stomach medicine. It tones up the weak stomach, restores the impaired digestion, corrects the discreted liver, and produces between the cape and mantilla. One model consists off a double silk cape, gathered onto a plain shoulder piece, puffed up over the shoulders and peaked in front. The shoulder piece is edged with silk. A month or two ago the fint went forth that we were not to add even an inch to our height by our headgear. This has been greatly modified, and though the shapes of hats and bonnets are flat, the trimming is raised up in forms becoming to the wearer. In spite of the favor of silk skirts, those of white cambric have not been discarded by my means. We see them as much as ever in every handsome trousseau and the style of trimming most in vogue is that of embroidered tabs or spikes, falling over flounces of Valenciennes

Very few tastefully drested women have I seen, says a London letter. The laddes here west costly tollets of an evening, but they have an appearance as if their fine things had been shot on to them out of a cannen. They display their jewels with a generosity that is simply vulgar. It is not unusual to see laddes at the the theatre with four or five diamond brooches up and down the front of their bodices. As a class, the barmaids are splendid-looking creatures — redcheeked, ample-breasted and with magnificent hatr. Among the house-servants, too, fine specimens of physical beauty are frequently to be met with, but the women of the upper classes are disappointing in appearance, and in movement they are, contrary to tradition, award; the English woman either swaggers or shuffles.

It was a cord of white oak chopped down and sawed up by her own hands, and sent as circumstantial evidence of the health she had gained by following his directions to live an open-air life in the woods.
